Event details

28 - 30 June 2019 | South Kensington

This summer we’re bringing our annual Festival out onto Exhibition Road for a new three-day celebration of curiosity, discovery and exploration in South Kensington that brings together arts and science.

We’re hoping to engage more people than ever before with not only the amazing research and innovation that we do every day but with our amazing Imperial community. This is the biggest and most collaborative event we’ve ever run, a true celebration of the sciences and the arts coming together.

It’s also the biggest volunteer team we’ve ever had to help make sure everyone has a great experience at the Festival. We’ll provide you a choice of shifts across the Festival, training and orientation of the site, free lunch each day and thank you celebrations pre- and post- Festival. It’s also a great chance to get to know different people from across the College and those from over 10 partner organisations that are helping to deliver the Festival, join us!

Imperial College London

The Great Exhibition Road Festival

In the summer of 2019, Imperial will collaborate with 26 neighbours across the Albertopolis, including some of the world’s most iconic museums and institutions, to create a unique festival fusing art, science, technology and curiosity.

Envisioning the spirit of the first Great Exhibition in 1851, which one-third of the country’s population visited, The Great Exhibition Road Festival will offer a free weekend of discovery across the 20th & 30th of June 2019. It will mark the bicentenary of the birth of Queen Victoria, and Prince Albert, and take inspiration from the Prince’s vision for the area as a dedicated centre for research, learning and creativity.

Imperial’s own Festival will be a part of this larger festival partnership, with exhibits, talks, workshops and activities on our own South Kensington Campus, as well as exciting partnerships with and in other institutions and on Exhibition Road itself.

The Great Exhibition Road Festival is a chance to showcase the sciences and the arts at their collaborative best, embracing the spirit of the pioneer that drove the creating of Albertopolis.

The event will be coordinated by the team behind Imperial’s own Festival, which attracted over 20,000 members of the public for its seventh iteration in 2018. For 2019, the organisers believe a similar ethos can help the Great Road Exhibition Festival provide an even larger platform for the College staff and students to engage new communities and audiences.

The organisers believe the range of partnering organisation will lead to unique collaborations between scientists, artists and other creative partners, giving the public the sort of one-off experiences that Exhibition Road is uniquely placed to provide.
